MAGGI

Nestlé, a Swiss multinational food and beverage company, manufactures Maggie. Henri Nestlé founded Nestlé in 1866 after developing a milk-based food for babies who were unable to breastfeed. This marked the start of the company's move into the food industry. Nestlé saw the potential of instant noodles and purchased the rights to sell them in Europe. In the late 1960s, they branded it "Maggi" and introduced it to the European market. Because of its ease of use and low cost, the product was an instant success.

Nestlé continued to expand the Maggie brand globally, tailoring the product to different countries' tastes and preferences. Maggie has grown in popularity in India, where it is regarded as a quick and tasty snack or meal. In India, it is frequently flavored with different spices and ingredients to suit local tastes.

PROBLEM
